EXCEPT FOR HIMSELF Words and music - Elisa Montaldo

Wakin' up early in the morning sayin' hello to a brand new day everything seems so good and you know that you deserve it after living what you've lived and after you've cried all your tears and all your pains arevrepaid

tryin' hard to fit in the present giving life lessons to everyone don't you see the suffering that is hidden in other hearts? like a book with too many pages you forgot how it started and you keep on thinking this is who you are

Nothing can change someone who is sure to be the broken be the wounded be the only person in the world, in this mad world who knows what it's the best for me, for us, for them....except for himself

Even if time is passing, you stay locked into your big home with a rope around your dreams drowning sunny days into a dark room maybe if you take a look, you'll see that reality is not as bad as you always believed

Nothing can change someone who is sure to be the right one be the good one be the only person in the world, in this mad world who knows what it's the best for me, for us, for them....

Will you change your mind, will you try to change your mind? will you understand that you're not always right will you let someone show you things that you don't see you will be suprised!

...in this mad world who knows what it's the best for me, for us, for them...except for himself